

Short Biography: George Kahumoku, Jr.

There's a reason he's been called Hawaii's Renaissance man: George Kahumoku Jr. is a multiple Grammy Award winning master slack key guitarist, songwriter, world-traveling performer, teacher, artist, story-teller and writer, farmer and entrepreneur. He hosts a weekly show on Maui called George Kahumoku Jr's Slack Key Show: Masters of Hawaiian Music which just celebrated it's 16th Anniversary. He has recently recorded a new CD, Renaissance Man. He will be touring in January-March 2020 and will hold his week-long Annual Slack Key Guitar & Ukulele Workshop on Maui in June. Around all of this he cultivates taro and raises sheep on his upland Maui farm.

Full Biography: George Kahumoku, Jr.

There's a reason he's been called Hawaii's Renaissance man: George Kahumoku Jr. is a multiple Grammy Award & Na Hoku Hanohano Award winning master slack key guitarist, songwriter, world-traveling performer, high school teacher, artist and sculptor, story-teller and writer, farmer and entrepreneur.

In February of 2006, George, fellow artist and producer, Daniel Ho and others were thrilled to receive the 48th Grammy Award for Best Hawaiian Album for their compilation recording, Masters of Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar, Vol. 1: Live in Concert from Maui. But George's Grammy fame doesn't stop there: The sequels to this recording, Legends of Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar: Live from Maui won the 49th Grammy and then in 2008, Treasures of Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar won the 50th Grammy Award. Two years later, Masters of Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar, Vol. 2: Live in Concert from Maui won again. All four recordings are compilations from George's weekly Slack Key Show: Masters of Hawaiian Music located at the beautiful Napili Kai Beach Resort on Maui, (www.slackkeyshow.com). George is the musical host to a different Hawaiian music artist each week. Started in 2003, his show is the first long-running weekly concert series featuring the great slack key and Hawaiian musicians of today.

George is currently living on Maui with his wife, Nancy, at a beautiful upland farm on the pristine north side of the West Maui Mountains. He recently retired from 40 years of teaching at risk kids, art, ceramics, guitar & ukulele at private and public schools over the years including the historic Lahainaluna High School and directing the inception of the Institute of Hawaiian Music at UH Maui College.

Farming being in his blood, George now spends much of his time maintaining his 3-acre farm growing fruit and vegetables, dry-land taro (for his famous home-made poi) and tending his sheep, chickens, and miniature horses. True to his Hawaiian heritage, wherever he goes George always brings bundles of fresh produce to share with friends and students.

Every summer in June, George Kahumoku Jr.'s Annual Maui Slack Key Guitar and Ukulele Workshop takes place featuring George and other stellar musicians and instructors such as Led Kaapana, Jeff Peterson, and Herb Ohta Jr. This workshop is one of the great musical experiences in the Islands today, and the result of George's belief in sharing, celebrating and perpetuating the unique musical genre of Hawaiian Slack Key Guitar.
